Coba’s Capitol Comments

Legislative leadership continues to delay the potential special session as there is hope for another federal stimulus package. The latest information from key insiders is that a special session could be after the fourth of July to allow Congress to act on another major package. The next federal package is expected to contain assistance for state and local governments hard hit by COVID-19 which would allow Oregon leaders to not have to make major cuts to key policy areas as education, health care and prisons.

Meeting new candidates has been difficult during the pandemic so each legislative caucus has moved to online opportunities to listen to candidates discuss their background and campaign priorities. These meetings usually feature two candidates and are an hour well spent listening to candidates talk about their priorities and respond to questions from lobbyists. These will continue for the foreseeable future.
