Coba’s Capitol Comments
The closing of most policy committees on May 24 was a sure sign that the glide path towards sine die is under way in Salem. Still open are the Rules, Revenue, Ways and Means and the Joint Tax Expenditure Committee to do major policy work. Regular policy committees use this time to hold informational hearings on issues they didn’t get to or will be teed up next session. Legislative leaders are still shooting for a June 21 adjournment.

The major issue outstanding is HB 2020, the carbon bill which sits in the Ways and Means Committee for further action. The latest version of the bill is here: https://olis.leg.state.or.us/liz/2019R1/Downloads/MeasureDocument/HB2020

ACEC members interested in the business activities tax in the school funding bill should watch the Joint Tax Expenditure Committee which meets each Friday. Diana Strassmaier with Aldrich Advisors and I attended the committee meeting last Friday and met with Senator Hass after the hearing. He is aware of our issue regarding subcontractors paying their own taxes and will assist in clarifying the record to ensure that our tax liability is fair. Hass mentioned other businesses with the same concern and he will assist.

ODOT Director Matt Garrett honored

More than fifty members turned out to honor ODOT Director Matt Garrett during the May dinner last week. Several ACEC members praised Garrett’s service to industry and thanked him for his willingness to listen and collaborate.

Garrett has the lead the department under three governors—Kate Brown, John Kitzhaber and Ted Kulongoski. He is the longest continuously-serving department of transportation director in the nation. Garrett is expected to step down as Director next month. ACEC Oregon is a key participant in the search committee.

Introducing “Engineering Influence,” ACEC’s new Podcast

ACEC National recently launched its new podcast series, “Engineering Influence,” which can be found on iTunes and on the Podbean podcasting network.

Hosted by ACEC’s Washington, DC based staff, Engineering Influence features interviews and analysis of current affairs affecting the engineering industry, economic and business trends, and interviews with thought leaders and newsmakers.

You’re invited to subscribe to the podcast, which is updated regularly with new episodes. If you know someone who would be a good guest for Engineering Influence, please contact Jeff Urbanchuk, ACEC’s Director of Strategic Communications at jurbanchuk@acec.org.
